

SoTL DISSEMINATION FUND REPORT 2023

The Office of the Provost and VP Academic offers $60,000 (on a pilot basis) to support dissemination of Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL) work with direct implications for UBC. Funds were made available in three installments and have been managed and adjudicated by the Institute for the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (ISoTL)¹.

The fund became available November 2018 with the first recipients receiving funding notification in January 2019. Rolling applications were introduced in the Spring of 2019 - before that, the deadlines were in line with the SoTL Seed Program (every 6 months).

Any full-time faculty member at UBC can apply for the award, which can be used for conference registration and travel costs (up to $1,000) and/or Article Processing Charges (APC) or other fees related to publishing open access (up to $2,000).

SUCCESSFUL PROPOSALS

GIVING BACK TO THE SoTL COMMUNITY AT UBC

Recipients' commitment to give back to UBC include active participation in CTLT Institutes, Celebrate Learning Week, Celebrate SoTL Day, Departmental Research Days, as well as presenting outcomes to committees and working groups (e.g. the Office of UBC Health's Evaluation Working Group; Health Curriculum Committee).

REJECTED PROPOSALS

Reasons for proposal rejection include: research was not directly focused on teaching and learning or had limited implications for teaching and learning in higher education at UBC (as per criteria for the fund); contribution in preparation (i.e., had not been accepted at the time of application); applicant not meeting eligibility criteria; and application incompleteness.

¹ The ISoTL kept an overhead of $5,000 per installment to offset administrative costs associated with the management of the fund.
